

Abstract

In an exercise machine having a static type resistance for use with a repetitive exercise having a desired parameter such as time per repetition or desired heart rate of the exerciser, the improvement of means to determine the actual values of the parameter and to then automatically continually adjust the value of the resistance so as to keep the desired parameter of the exercise within acceptable values.